St. Louis, MO and Chicago, IL (PRWEB) October 22, 2013 -- Korein Tillery has once again been named to the National Law Journal's "Plaintiffs' Hot List" as one of the top plaintiffs' litigation firms in the country. The list identifies 19 elite firms that "are at the cutting edge of plaintiffs' work" and that possess "an impressive track record" of wins for their clients in complex, high-stakes litigation. This is the seventh time Korein Tillery has been named to the list in the last ten years.

"We are proud to once again be recognized as one of the premier litigation firms in the country," said Senior Partner Stephen M. Tillery. "Our attorneys have handled and won cases involving virtually every substantive area of the law, and we've done it for clients ranging from individuals and governmental entities, to multi-billion-dollar companies. That we continue to be recognized by the National Law Journal as one of the nation's top firms speaks not only to our track record of success, but also the breadth and dexterity of our practice."

(Price v. Philip Morris Inc., Circuit Court of Madison County, Illinois, 00-L-112) Over the course of the last two years, Korein Tillery has helped negotiate $335 million in mortgage-backed-securities settlements from some of Wall Street's largest banks. Today, it continues to prosecute some of the most prominent securities and antitrust claims against Wall Street investment banks.
